WHERE PASSIONS BECOME COMMUNITIES

STARTING WITH FOOD & DANCE. EXPANDING INTO LIFESTYLE.

A person with long dark hair, wearing a black short-sleeved crop top and bright orange pants, is captured in a dynamic pose, possibly dancing or performing. They are positioned in front of a vibrant, colorful graffiti wall. The graffiti features various abstract shapes and colors, including pink, blue, yellow, and black. The person's right arm is extended outwards, and their left leg is bent. The overall scene is energetic and artistic.

The Problem

- Current social media platforms have become noisy and unfocused.
- Users struggle because:
 - Feeds are cluttered with irrelevant content.
 - Algorithms optimize for engagement rather than usefulness.
 - Communities are fragmented.
 - Finding quality discussions is difficult.
- Content creators receive little recognition beyond likes.
- Businesses waste advertising budgets targeting the wrong audiences.
- Most platforms encourage passive scrolling instead of collaboration.
- There is no platform that organizes people around structured lifestyle interests while making participation genuinely fun.

Why start with food & entertainment

- Starting with food and entertainment is a strong strategy for a new social-media community because they are two of the most naturally social, emotional, visual and participatory forms of content.
- They are universal interests. Almost everyone eats, cooks, watches entertainment, listens to music, or enjoys performances. T
- They naturally create conversation
- Food creates questions such as:
 - “What are you cooking today?”
 - “What is your favourite seafood dish?”
- “Entertainment creates similar interaction
 - “Who is the better dancer?”
 - “Show us your moves.”
- That means users don't just consume content—they participate
